

John Bretherton Profile

I was brought up and went to school on the Wirral and have an MSc in Software Engineering from Liverpool University. My early career was in engineering applications (Boeing 777 Flight Control and the first motorway variable speed limit system). Since then, I have spent 20 years working in Finance and am currently Head of Commercials for a firm providing stock trade and custody services.

I lived in Leicester for many years and recently moved to Thurlaston (August '19) with my wife, Meenaxi, and two-year-old twins, Isaac and Zara. We thought the village was perfect for raising children, with beautiful surrounds and good local schools.

Having chosen a great place to live, I want to help ensure that Thurlaston's future remains bright. I am particularly interested in education, safety and the environment and believe that retaining our Parish Council is essential to influencing proposed changes to the village district.
